SEPTEMBER 2010

Editorial:

J.P. Jacqué

Since the beginning of his mandate, the President of the European Council had pointed out that foreign policy is one of the fields the European Council would give priority to work on. He was determined to put fully into practice article 22 TEU which entrusts the European Council to determine the strategic objectives of the Union in the context of the CFSP to the same extent as Community external policies. The economic crisis had delayed the prioritisation of this matter. It has henceforth been done since the European Council of 16 September 2010. On this occasion, the Council has not only dealt with several issues of foreign relations such as China or the upcoming G20 Summits, it has also defined the principles that the President Van Rompuy summed up in his press conference:

- “1. This is the beginning of a process. This European Council is the first in a row dedicated to foreign policy.*
- 2. Our key messages should be mandated by the European Council, prepared and implemented by the Foreign Affairs Council, the Commission and the High Representative.*
- 3. Reciprocity is a key word, it is not a dirty word; one can also speak about "mutual interests".”*

In its conclusions, the Council asks the High Representative, Lady Ashton, to evaluate the general perspectives of the relations with the main strategic partners and to present a first report by December 2010. President Van Rompuy asserted his wish that summits with EU partners should be better prepared and that the routine should be altered in order to target more specifically on “the accomplishment of EU objectives”. President Van Rompuy is in charge of leading this reform.

The European Council has wished to take the lead to conduct foreign policy, with both the High Representative and the Commission being in charge of the implementation. Time will tell whether these intentions will stand the test of time, however the existence of a fixed President of the European Council representing the Union during summits is a guarantee of continuity.

Our next meetings in Budapest as well as discussions during our TEPSA Working Groups will be an opportunity to exchange our views on this new development.

New Section: Introduction of a Member Institute

Introducing ‘Clingendael’

The Netherlands Institute of International Relations (‘Clingendael’) is a think tank and diplomatic training institute situated in The Hague. Clingendael’s location – in a park with all the ministries at a short distance – is well chosen to support international exchange and facilitate interactions between practitioners, academia and media. Clingendael covers research on a wide range of issues in international relations including our Asian Studies Programme, International Energy Programme, Diplomatic Studies and Security and Conflict Studies. The Clingendael European Studies Programme (CESP) consists of ten researchers and trainers and works closely together with the other Clingendael Programmes.

Our main objective is to contextualise current EU developments in longer term trends. The research addresses a wide range of topics. The areas of expertise within CESP include:

- EU’s external relations
- European governance and better regulation
- Justice and Home Affairs, asylum, migration and external borders
- EU Climate Policy
- EU Institutions
- EU Budget
- EU Agencies
- Internal Market

- EU Energy Policy
- Negotiation and international culture

Our work involves consultancy projects, academic publications and training. In addition, we operate in the media. It is important for our work to be well connected to policy makers and experts in the field and to organise seminars and public debates. Our events range from organising international workshops on particular topics for senior policy makers to debates with M(E)P’s for the wider public and high level conferences for all types of players in for instance the field of ‘Resource scarcity and the role of the EU’.¹

Moreover, we provide training programmes for different types of organisations and audiences. For instance, we are training approximately 1300 Polish civil servants for their upcoming Polish Presidency in cooperation with College of Europe and the Diplomatic Academy of Vienna.

For details on our activities, please refer to our website <http://www.clingendael.nl/cesp/>.

EXACT

On the first of October the Marie Curie Initial Training Network "Integrated Training Programme for Analysis, Assessment and Advice on EU's External Action and its Institutional Architecture" (EXACT) will start. EXACT aims at preparing 12 Early Stage Researchers (ESR) for professional and academic careers in universities as well as in the public and private sector in academically based consulting for policy makers. 2011 three new EXACT fellows will join the TEPSA secretariat. During their stay at TEPSA the EXACT fellows will be fully part of the TEPSA team and work on different projects, organise events and publish research. We look forward to welcoming the first trio of EXACT fellows, who will be introduced in a TEPSA newsletter of 2011. You can already meet all 12 EXACT fellows during our Pre-Presidency Conference in Budapest, where they will be active as note takers. More information can be found at www.exact-training.net

EP Hearing on Artic Issues

After the delivery of their briefing commissioned by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the European Parliament, both Ms. Neumann (not present) from the Stiftung Wissenschaft and Politik (SWP) and Dr. Valur Ingimundarson from the University of Iceland, have been invited by the European Parliament to present their paper to the Brussels audience on the 2nd September 2010. The hearing discussed "a Sustainable EU Policy for the High North" and was introduced by Gabriele Albertini, Chair of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. The researchers covered on one hand how the EU policies affect the High North, illustrated by the examples of climate change and environmental policies and fisheries policy and on the other hand described the geopolitics of Arctic resources. The Director of Ocean Futures in Oslo also took part to the hearing and presented the changes, challenges and chances for the Arctic region. Institut für Europäische Politik (IEP)

EU-27 Watch No. 9 published

The new issue of EU-27 Watch is now available on the new internet platform www.EU-27Watch.org. The EU-27 Watch No. 9 gives an overview on the current national debates on European policy in the 27 EU member states and the 4 candidate countries.

Laid out in four segments, the platform provides the reader with a comparative introduction, a list of responses sorted by country, a list of responses sorted by question, and a timeline listing all major events in EU politics since 2004. All texts are available in HTML and PDF format. All back issues of the EU-27 Watch and the Enlargement/Agenda 2000-Watch are available as well.

The topics discussed in the EU-27 No. 9 are: the implementation of the Lisbon Treaty, enlargement and the European Neighbourhood Policy, the financial crisis and economic policy, and climate and energy policy. A comparative introduction gives an overview of the debates in the 31 countries covered by the EU-27 Watch.

Electronic Collection “SPES Policy Papers” launched

The electronic collection “SPES Policy Papers”, published by the Institut für Europäische Politik, is dedicated to issues of current and future relevance to European foreign and security policy. Written by fellows of the Study Programme on European Security (SPES) for fellows from Central and Eastern Europe – conducted by IEP and supported by the Volkswagen Foundation – as well as researchers from IEP, the papers focus on four thematic clusters:

- The EU and Russia
- European Enlargement and Neighbourhood Policy
- The EU’s civilian and military crisis management
- European energy policy and climate change policy

Against the background that the scientific debate on European foreign and security policy is often dominated by Western perspectives, this paper series stands out by providing a platform for alternative viewpoints that focus on external perceptions and assessments of EU policies, actions and discourses.

The first policy paper (to download here) written by Iryna Solonenko attempts to explain to what extent the EU has had an impact on internal developments in Ukraine since the European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) was launched in 2005. By tracing the resonance that this EU policy has had on different actors and processes, the paper challenges the dominant discourse about the failure of the ENP.

Seminar: the elections in Bosnia-Herzegovina
4 October 2010

DIIS continues Lighthouse Europe, a series of public debates on issues of strategic relevance for the foreign policy of the EU and of its member states. In relation to the general elections in Bosnia on 3 October, DIIS is hosting a seminar with the title: “The Future of Bosnia: Stability, Governance and Europe” with the participation of experts from Bosnian as well as Denmark.

Almost 15 years since the Dayton Agreement put an end to the civil war, the challenges facing the country remain enormous. Bosnia is deeply divided between its two entities and burdened by a convoluted public administration. In the recent years, reforms have stalled, leaving the country even further behind its neighbours on the path towards the European Union. As the international community loses influence on Bosnia, external factors such as Kosovo's independence put pressure on the unity of the state. The initial assumption that the “golden carrot” of EU-membership would trigger comprehensive reforms appears to be losing credibility, also due to the inconsistencies of EU policy.

“24th Wave of the Barometer of the Elcano Royal Institute”.

The 24th edition of the BRIE -a survey carried out three times a year of a sample of 1,200 people considered a fair cross-section of the Spanish population- focuses on issues such as the balance of the Spanish EU Presidency, the financial crisis, Israel's public image after the assault on the fleet in Gaza, immigration, veils and crucifixes in schools, Spanish military missions abroad and the evaluation of international leaders.

“ ‘Innovating Europe’ in troubled times: a first assessment of Spain’s EU Presidency in 2010” (ARI), Ignacio Molina.

After a very rough six months, Spain completes the first rotating Presidency of the EU to be held under the Lisbon Treaty.

“ The Belgian EU Presidency Setting Europe Back into Action and Laying the Future Institutional Groundwork” (ARI), S. Andoura.

Belgium took over the Presidency of the EU on 1 July 2010 from Spain and began it in the midst of a national political crisis “Cyber Security in Spain: A Proposal for its Management” (ARI), Enrique Fojón Chamorro and Ángel F. Sanz Villalba.

Social, economic and cultural relations are increasingly dependent on information and communication technologies and infrastructures (cyberspace), making it necessary to devise a national security system (cyber security) that can manage the risks that threaten their adequate operation.

“ Spain’s Main Multinationals: Building on their Success” (WP), William Chislett.

Spain’s main multinationals are going from strength to strength. The investments and acquisitions made abroad over the last 15 years or so are increasingly profitable and significantly reducing the reliance on a domestic market that is in the doldrums. But for these investments some of these companies would barely survive the downturn in their home market.

“ The EU’s Global Governance Versus China’s Harmonious World” (ARI), Wang Youming.

The EU’s ‘Global Governance’ and China’s ‘Harmonious World’ seem to be competing to be the dominant idea on international relations in the new century.
